FOREWORD

This Guide is the first of a series of pamphlets that the Ministry of Education propose to bring out on facilities for studies in India. Of late, more and more students from abroad, particularly from countries where educational facilities are not adequate, have been coming to India for study in various faculties. It is important that they should know about the facilities available in our country at graduate and postgraduate levels. These are not so well-known as they should be, not only among students coming from abroad, but also among students in our own country. It is, therefore, hoped that in the series of pamphlets proposed to be brought out, an adequate account of the more significant facilities for studies in India would be presented.

In the present pamphlet, details are given about the courses offered by Indian colleges and universities in Education, Law and Journalism. Our purpose would be served if our own students at home and those who seek admission to our educational institutions from abroad found this Guide useful and informative.

PREM KIRPAL,
Educational Adviser
to the Government of India.

EDUCATION

(A) TEACHERS' TRAINING

TEACHERS' TRAINING AT UNDERGRADUATE LEVEL

Institutions for training in education at undergraduate level are normally administered by the Departments of Education of the various State Governments in India. A large number of such institutions exist throughout the country providing a one to two years' course, leading to a diploma/certificate. The minimum qualification for admission to such courses is normally the Secondary School Leaving Certificate. Quite a number of these institutions provide for specialist training in Art, Master's Crafts, Master's Physical Training Instructors, Nursery School Masters etc. Diploma and Certificate holders at the undergraduate level are normally employed in the Elementary schools in India (that is, institutions providing for the first 7-8 years of education).

FACILITIES FOR BACHELOR'S DEGREE/DIPLOMA IN EDUCATION

Almost all the universities in India have institutions which provide for first degree in Education. The duration of the course is normally one academic year. While some of the universities award a diploma at the end of the course, others award a degree. The diplomas are known as Dip. in Ed. and the degrees are called either B.Ed. (Bachelor of Education) or B.T. (Bachelor of Teaching) or L.T. (Licentiate in Teaching).
